Additional Information before your Session

Some of our offices are located upstairs, however if you need to meet in an office on the first floor, please inform your therapist before the scheduled Intake appointment so they can make arrangements.

We have three separate waiting areas throughout the building– two located downstairs and one located upstairs. When you arrive, please help yourself to refreshments in the front lobby and have a seat in one of the waiting areas.

Please text your therapist when you arrive or if you might be running late to your appointment. When your therapist is available, they will meet you in the waiting area and escort you to their office.

INFORMED CONSENT AND HIPAA NOTIFICATION

Welcome to ReEnvision Counseling! We strive to provide the highest quality of care in a manner that is comfortable and convenient for our clients. Please do not hesitate to ask questions about any of these matters.

The following information is provided to assist clients in understanding ReEnvision Counseling's policies & procedures.

Appointments

Your first appointment will be the Intake Session, which is reserved with a credit card number once you've been assigned a therapist. After this initial assessment, you and your therapist will schedule additional sessions together. You are able to communicate directly with your therapist rather than going through a receptionist. When you arrive for your session, please help yourself to water, coffee and/or snacks, and your therapist will meet you in the waiting area. Please give your therapist at least 24 hours notice if you must cancel a session. Sometimes illnesses or other emergencies might prevent you from this, which is perfectly understandable. However, that time is reserved specifically for your session, so we must charge you 70% of the session fee if it is not canceled at least 24 hours in advance. This helps to offset the therapist's lost hour of work but also keeps you from having to pay the full session fee. We will bill the late cancellation fee to the credit card on file, unless you request us to do otherwise.

Emergencies and Telephone Calls

While you will be seen at a reserved time that fits your individual scheduling demands, there may arise situations when you feel as though you need to speak with your therapist between appointments. If you feel such a need, you may call during normal office hours and your therapist will get back with you as soon as they are able to do so. Emailing is also an excellent option for correspondence with your therapist. If the call will be longer than 5-10 minutes, your therapist might suggest a 25 minute phone session at half the price of a regular session.

If you are experiencing an emergency, you need to go immediately to the emergency room at the nearest hospital or call the crisis hotline at 855-274-7471.

Sessions

During a session, your therapist will do one or more of the following: (a) listen to your concerns and allow you to ventilate your feelings; (b) help you set goals and develop a plan of action to overcome your problems; (c) work with you in reviewing events/ thoughts/ feelings that are hindering you in reaching your goals; and (d) give you reading/ writing assignments designed to help you gain useful insights into your unique situation.

Risks Involved in Counseling

Counseling involves a degree of risk, usually in the form of feelings that may increase in discomfort for a temporary time. The therapist-client relationship often involves self-disclosure and confrontation, as well as encouragement and support. Sometimes counseling involves recalling unpleasant aspects of your history. Also, any change- even positive change- often disrupts a person's established system. You may meet resistance from other people in your life as a result of changes accomplished through therapy.

HIPAA Notification for Clients

ReEnvision Counseling is in compliance with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) of 1996 by informing clients of how they use and disclose Personal Health Information (PHI).

-What is PHI (Personal Health Information)?

Name; Address; Telephone Number; E-mail Address; Social Security Number; Medical Information (including initial assessment, progress notes, discharge summaries, treatment plans, etc. Any documentation related to your care)

Client Records of Disclosure

In general, the HIPAA privacy act gives individuals the right to request a restriction on uses and disclosures of their PHI. The individual is also provided the right to request confidential communications or that a communication of PHI be made by alternative means such as sending correspondence to the individual's office instead of at the individual's home or opting to leave a limited amount of information in a voicemail.

Square Inc.

If you and your therapist choose to utilize the Customers feature of Square Inc., the ReEnvision Counseling Staff members may have access to a limited amount of your PHI (name, fee, email, last 4 digits of credit card & dates of service).

Social Media

In order to uphold healthy, ethical boundaries, ReEnvision encourages all staff to reserve their private social media accounts and contacts for personal use only. We recommend that therapists and clients limit their interactions to the therapeutic setting in an effort to protect the confidential nature of the therapeutic relationship. Staff generally should not initiate or accept friend requests except in unusual circumstances such as the situation where an in-person friendship pre-dates the treatment relationship. Even in that case the therapist should consider "unfriending" that person for at least the duration of treatment. This is in the client's best interest and also for the personal health and wellness of the therapist.

Issues of Confidentiality and Privileged Communications

What you discuss in your established relationship with your therapist is protected by privileged communication laws in the State of Tennessee. This means that no one is allowed to gain access to your personal information (PHI) without your expressed verbal or written consent. All communications are kept private, confidential, and privileged. This is a key aspect of the counseling relationship and one that we work to protect in all situations.

Occasionally, however, for your safety and the safety of others, it becomes necessary for confidentiality to be broken.

The following is a list of serious events for which, by Tennessee State Law, your therapist is required to break confidentiality: (a) If there is imminent danger of serious harm to yourself and/or other people, a therapist may reveal such information to the intended victim and/ or agencies necessary to prevent such harm to yourself or another person; (b) If there is evidence revealed of physical and/or sexual abuse of children, the therapist must report this information to the appropriate authorities; (c) If a court of law issue a legitimate subpoena, ReEnvision Counseling is required by law to provide the information specifically described in the subpoena. (d) for therapists who are under a temporary license and receiving supervision from a licensed professional to collaborate and gain support. (e) for the purpose of pursuing professional excellence, we will occasionally collaborate with our team of professionals in staff meetings, but we always ask a client's permission before using any identifying information.

It is considered "best practice" for a therapist to occasionally consult with supervisors and/ or colleagues to gain perspective, advice, intervention suggestions, or ethical considerations. However, when a client's case is discussed, all identifying information, including names, are excluded from the conversation in order to protect the privacy and integrity of the client.

Telehealth Services Agreement

In the event that we cannot use our facilities for sessions or you are unable to come into the office due to temporary limitations such as medical conditions or distance due to travel, you have the option to participate in Telehealth Services.

“Telehealth” is defined as the use of electronic transmission to provide interactive real-time mental health services remotely, including consultation, assessment, diagnosis, treatment planning, counseling, psychotherapy, coaching, guidance, education, and transfer of medical information with an experienced psychotherapist. This can include both video and audio forms of communication, via the internet or telephone. Telehealth services do not include texting or email. Telehealth is governed by all the same ethics and laws that cover in-office, in-person, face-to-face psychotherapy. Advantages and disadvantages exist in using this method as it offers a way to assist people to meet their mental health needs digitally; however, it may not provide the same level of comfort or seem as complete when talking about personal or private matters.

Emergencies

Just as with in-person services, if an emergency should occur during a telehealth session, the psychotherapist may consider taking any steps necessary to ensure the safety of the client or of others.

Scheduling

Just as with an in-person appointment, telehealth sessions are scheduled by prior arrangement.

Scheduling a telehealth appointment involves reserving time specifically for you. Just as with in-person appointments, you are responsible for keeping all telehealth appointments.

We should usually start and end on time. In all telehealth sessions, the therapist will initiate the telehealth session, unless other arrangements have been made. A window will remain open around the starting time of your appointment. Just as with an in-person session, if your psychotherapist doesn't hear from you, s/he will attempt to reach you but will discontinue after several attempts.

Cancellations and unkept appointments are treated just like in-person cancellations and unkept appointments. The psychotherapist is not responsible for the client's ability to participate in the session, including technological limitations.

Confidentiality

The laws that protect the confidentiality of your medical information in the office also apply to telehealth sessions, including mandatory and permissive exceptions to confidentiality.

The client and psychotherapist both agree to keep the same privacy safeguards as during an in-person session. The environment should be free from unexpected or unauthorized intrusions or disruptions to our communication. There is a risk of being overheard by a third party near you if you do not conduct the session in an enclosed private room, with reasonable sound barriers, and with no one else present or observing.

The client and psychotherapist both agree to not record the telehealth sessions without prior written consent of both parties.

Consent

You have the right to opt-in or opt-out of the methods of telehealth communication at any time, without affecting your right to future care or treatment.

It is your responsibility to discuss prior to the telehealth session which medium will be used, how to use it, and any necessary preparation.

Security

No electronic transmission system is considered completely safe from intrusion. Interception of communication by third parties remains technically possible. Due to the complexities of electronic media and the internet, risks of telehealth include the potential for the release of private information, including audio and images. So, your psychotherapist cannot fully guarantee the security of telehealth sessions. You are responsible for information security on your computer, laptop, tablet, or smartphone.

Telephone

Telehealth can include telephone sessions. When using the telephone, remember to be in a place you feel comfortable speaking about personal and private matters.

Video Conferencing

The client is responsible for his/her own hardware and software, audio and video peripherals, and connectivity and bandwidth considerations.

At the time of the telehealth appointment, it is your responsibility to have your electronic device on, video conferencing software launched, and be ready to start the session at the time of the scheduled telehealth appointment.

Payment

Just like in-person services, telehealth services are a professional service, and a fee is charged at the same rate as in-person services.

I have read and understood the information provided above. I have discussed it with my psychotherapist/mediator. All of my questions have been answered to my satisfaction. I hereby request and consent to telehealth services as a part of my treatment. I agree to abide by the terms of this agreement.

Practices and Procedures for ReEnvision Counseling’s “Good Faith Estimate”

ReEnvision Counseling has always placed top priority on open, honest, and clear communication between therapists and clients. We do that not only from a values-based approach but also from a research-backed principle, since the therapeutic alliance is among the most important aspects of effective clinical therapy. The therapeutic relationship provides a safe space for clients to be seen and heard, practice relationship skills, and have healthy boundaries modeled and encouraged.

At ReEnvision Counseling, all financial conversations and exchanges are handled directly between therapist and client. Our informed consent has always included discussion regarding the following:

- costs and options for clients at the outset of counseling as well as throughout the process,
- the difficulties counseling can present as people begin to grow and change,
- the importance of managing expectations for one’s journey in counseling,, and
- the collaborative nature of the therapist-client relationship in setting goals for therapy and
- keeping ongoing communication about this as the journey unfolds.

All therapists at ReEnvision are trained in the delivery of trauma-informed practices, which involve helping clients feel safe in the amount of control and voice they hold in each aspect of the therapy process. Clients are always encouraged to voice their thoughts and preferences, including choice of therapist, session length, types of interventions used, and focus of each session. Therapists are tasked with providing clinical and financial feedback to clients about various ways to reach these goals and reasonable expectations concerning the parameters clients desire.

During the pandemic, Congress passed something called a “No Surprises Act”, which was intended to help protect people from surprise medical bills that come from various out-of-network doctors, hospitals, or other providers they didn’t choose (please see <https://www.kff.org/health-reform/issue-brief/no-surprises-act-implementation-what-to-expect-in-2022/>).

In the counseling setting, it would be highly unlikely for clients to “inadvertently” receive care from their therapist that they did not choose or anticipate. We want to do the best we can to comply with this act in the spirit for which it was intended while also protecting the integrity of the counseling setting and the necessity of not having it medicalized. Insurance involvement in counseling necessitates rapid diagnosing of mental health conditions and can limit the number of sessions and types of interventions used. This is one of the primary reasons we’ve chosen to not work with insurance companies at ReEnvision Counseling. However, we do want to provide clients with all information possible about fees for as long as they seek counseling on the variety of items with which they are presenting. With that in mind, please review the following:

- Our fees (including late cancellation/no show fees) are listed in the intake paperwork and are predictable, requiring payment at each session. We do not carry balances, so the fee for one session must be paid before the next one starts. There will never be any unexpected charge. You will have no surprises here.

- There are multiple factors that contribute to the length of time a person spends in therapy. Often the goals a person wants to prioritize at the start of their work shift as they learn more about themselves and what they are needing. Therapists must also communicate to clients what types of interventions they can responsibly recommend and implement at different points in the client’s journey. For example, certain approaches that tend to yield sudden change in a particular area can also introduce struggle in another; if a person does not have the internal resources needed to handle this outside of their sessions, it would be both unethical and unprofessional to implement said approach. The counselor is the expert in the field, and the client is the expert in their own life. The counseling journey is a shared process between therapist and client at every turn of therapy, and it is neither practical nor possible for organic, healthy growth to occur if the therapist and client are continually tasked with re-writing an expense projection every step of the way.
- Clients themselves often choose to extend their predicted time in therapy simply based on the progress they experience and the realization that other areas of their lives could also benefit. It is our belief at ReEnvision that decisions to pursue health in a variety of areas should not be pathologized, or assigned a diagnosis as to what is “wrong” with them, but rather embraced as an empowering way to take control of one’s life. Again, the options as to how often and which therapeutic interventions might be most helpful to each individual - and the constraining factors they might have at work- are part of the ongoing conversation between therapist and client.
- While we do strongly encourage weekly therapy for at least the first 2-3 months of counseling, we understand that some people are limited to every other week. We will accommodate that while also explaining the limitations of a 14 day gap between sessions when trying to first implement a treatment plan that impacts day-to-day life. After the first few months of counseling, clients often transition to less frequent appointments. When all desired goals are reasonably satisfied, clients typically choose to end therapy and contact their therapist as needed in the future, or schedule “tune up” sessions every few months to check in with their mental and emotional health.

According to the American Psychological Association, “on average 15 to 20 sessions are required for 50 percent of patients to recover as indicated by self-reported symptom measures”. Additionally, they state that through the working relationship between the client and counselor sometimes the preference is for “longer periods (e.g., 20 to 30 sessions over six months), to achieve more complete symptom remission and to feel confident in the skills needed to maintain treatment gains”.

<https://www.apa.org/ptsd-guideline/patients-and-families/length-treatment>)

Since the “Good Faith Estimate” requires providers across all fields to quote an exact estimate and not a range, our estimate reflects the highest number of sessions possible within a year of therapy at ReEnvision Counseling. Clients satisfied with initial goals often stop around the six-month mark (or shift to less frequent appointments), although many do continue for a year. We prefer an overly cautious and conservative approach when asked to project a client’s potential expense. Therapy is not a journey that should be embarked upon lightly.

Details of the Estimate

Here are the estimates for each tier of payment, quoted weekly for a year (minus 2 holiday weeks) at the 50 minute rate as well as the 80 minute rate. Estimated costs apply for 12 months from the date of the Good Faith Estimate (GFE) unless the therapist's rates change, at which time a new GFE would be generated.
